Program Key

Our program includes a lot of information in a little space. This page contains a guide to deciphering the session listings.

Sessions are numbered according to the day of the session. Those beginning with 1s will be held on Wednesday, 2s and 3s on Thursday, 4's on Friday and 5's on Saturday. At the back of the program, you will find the professional development sessions, each identified by a letter prefix.

Hotel maps will be provided in the registration packet you receive when first checking in at the conference registration desk.

Many sessions are sponsored by one of AEA's 30 Topical Interest Groups.

SESSION 403: Presidential Strand MultiPaper Room: Lanai

Sponsored by the Topical Interest Group on Minority Issues in Evaluation

Making Room at the Table: Voices of the Next Generation on Evaluation Capacity Building

Increasing the Presence and Success of Students of Color in the Field of Evaluation: A Comprehensive Approach, Kimberly M Hall, University of Illinois at Chicago

Discussant: James Earl Davis, University of Delaware

This is the session title.

Some sessions have a discussant who will respond to the presenters or panelists.

The session chair will convene the session and introduce the presenters or panelists.

The presenters or panelists are listed in the body of the session information. Titles of individual presentations are listed in italics, followed by the presenters' names. If you are looking for more information about a particular presenter you may wish to check the index and address directory in the back of the program.

Registration Desk and Job Bank

Registration: The Registration Desk for Evaluation 2000 will be located in the main foyer of the conference floor of the Sheraton Waikiki. Look for the AEA signs as you come off of the escalators. The Registration Desk should be your first stop during the conference. It is where you will receive your name badge and conference materials, and where you can return with questions or concerns at any time during the conference. It is also where you can drop off donations for the silent auction or check the message board and where we post any last minute changes in the program.

Job Bank: Job bank services are free to all attendees. The AEA Job bank includes listings of resumes and job openings and a space for private review of these documents. The job bank staff will help you to arrange interviews at the conference. To participate, bring five copies of your resume or job listing to the job bank on Wednesday. Once there, you will be asked to fill out an information form to submit along with your documents.

Professional Development Sessions

The following professional development sessions will be held in conjunction with Evaluation 2000. Each offers an intensive investigation of a current topic or field-related skill. These require a separate fee and are filled on a first-come, first-served basis. Before the conference, check online for availability (www.eval.org). During the conference, check at the registration desk. Identification of the rooms in which these sessions are to be held will be posted on-site.

1. International Program Evaluation Approaches and Challenges (Monday & Tuesday, Oct 30-31, 9:00-4:00)

This two-day informal dialogue will allow you to share professional experiences and concerns about the conduct of evaluation in the international context. To organize and stimulate discussion, select experts will be invited to share aspects of their practice including:

- Current methodologies,
- Program impact evaluation, and
- Meeting the need for new professionals in international program evaluation.

Implications for the practice of international program evaluation will be discussed to promote evaluations that consider the specific economic, political, and cultural contexts in which they are conducted. You will be able to apply this information in the consideration of various structural and cultural challenges to international evaluation generally, and those specific to the measure of programming processes and outcomes. The workshop will be held at the PREL office, in beautiful downtown Honolulu, on the Monday and Tuesday prior to the conference. The registration cost is $25, to be paid on-site at PREL. Two-week advance notice via e-mail to Mary Church: churchm@prel.org is requested, for meeting room and transportation arrangements. [Mary Church, PREL; Michael Bamberger, The World Bank; Jim Rugh, CARE; and Mahesh Patel, UNICEF]

2. Kailana: A Voyaging Program for High Risk Hawaii Youth (Tuesday, Oct 31, 10:30-3:00)

Visit the Marimed Foundation's Kailana Program, an ocean-experiential residential and day treatment program for Hawaii males ages 14-18 facing emotional and educational challenges requiring integrated therapy and educational services. Kailana combines individual, group, and family therapy with academic and vocational instruction in a highly structured program through the use of ocean-oriented challenges, including inter-island voyaging on board the Foundation's 156-foot sailing ship TOLE MOUR. You will experience Kailana's unique program model, values, and treatment philosophy and approach. The presentation will include an emphasis on challenges associated with obtaining and using evaluation data for nonprofit youth services agencies with limited resources. Located at Kaneohe Bay, the cost is $15, to be paid on site to help defray the expense of transportation and lunch, both provided by the Marimed Foundation. Advance notice is required to Robert Grossman: kailana@pixi.com. Space is limited and available first-come, first-served. Wear casual clothes and be prepared to get your feet wet! [Marimed Foundation Staff, Charles Giuli, PREL, Lorri Bolton, American School of Professional Psychology]

A: Analyzing, Synthesizing and Interpreting Qualitative Data (Tuesday, Oct 31, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Intermediate

Increasing use of qualitative and mixed methods means that evaluators need to have a better grasp of qualitative analysis, the core of which is the ability to discern, compare and contrast, and interpret meaningful patterns in the data. The morning portion of this session will provide a sound grounding in the principles of qualitative analysis. The afternoon will concentrate on developing and honing the types of analytic and synthetic capabilities and skills most often required in applied evaluation research. You will work in small groups to identify relevant themes and patterns in "real" data drawn from intensive interview and focus group transcripts and observational summaries, and will present results to the whole group. Discussing how the small groups arrived at their analyses will raise issues of validity and reliability and highlight the advantages of multiple analysts working together. Strategies for writing up and presenting of qualitative analyses will also be covered. [Susan Berkowitz, Westat]

B: Evaluation 101 — Intro to Evaluation (Tuesday, Oct 31, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

The key elements of the evaluation process focus on the question, "what evaluation resources are transformed into what strategies to produce what outputs for whom?" Evaluation customers must become aware of the program and have the information needed to take action that enhances program results. A case-driven instructional process, using lecture, exercises, and discussion will expose you to the basic steps and tools for planning, implementing, and reporting useful evaluations. Tools include the logic modeling process, worksheets for team member skills, stakeholder involvement, information collection, data analysis, budget, meta-evaluation, and utilization tracking. A workbook with references will be provided. [John McLaughlin, University of Southern California and Gretchen Jordan, Sandia National Laboratories]

C: Utilization-focused Evaluation (Wednesday, Nov 1: 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

The morning will offer an overview of Utilization-Focused Evaluation based on the book by that name and will examine a menu-oriented approach to intended uses of evaluations for different intended primary users. The implications of this for evaluator-stakeholder interactions, design, methods, analysis, reporting, ethics, politics, and utilization will be discussed. A case example will illustrate basic premises and practices. In the afternoon, you will have the opportunity to present your own concerns and explore how to apply the premises of utilization-focused evaluation to your own situations. [Michael Quinn Patton, The Union Institute]

D: It's not where you go, it's how you get there!" Consulting Skills for the New Millennium (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

This interactive workshop is designed for evaluators who are either considering becoming independent consultants or who have recently begun consulting practice. Particular consideration will be given to emerging trends in the field. The workshop will provide you with an opportunity to explore some critical consulting topics and information will be provided regarding consulting as a field of endeavor. You will be asked to consider if you have the skills and characteristics required to be successful. Key issues will be identified that relate to getting and keeping evaluation contracts, including marketing techniques, tips on proposal writing and customer service. Several important aspects of running a professional consulting practice will be addressed including legal structures, quality and ethical issues, time management, growth strategies and ways of adapting to the demands of the new economy. Opportunities will be provided throughout the day for participants to participate in discussion, engage in self-reflection through guided activities, and problem solve. During a round-up session at the end of the workshop, participant issues will be addressed. [Gail Barrington, Barrington Research Group, Inc.]

E: Using Network Analysis (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Intermediate

Social Network Analysis (SNA) methodology analyzes relational data — data that focuses on the connections or links among components. Evaluators have many SNA models and examples of applications available. Economics has utilized SNA for understanding trade relationships; business - influence flows between Fortune 500 companies through shared directors; and social science - collaboration between social agencies servicing the same populations. For evaluators interested in the impact of variables such as informal and formal networks, and the structural patterns of groups on a project or program, this methodology provides an appropriate tool. SNA can assist you in determining the capacity of groups to implement the program being evaluated. The workshop will provide an introductory, concrete, working understanding of the methodology through using two SNA software packages. You will leave able to begin using SNA immediately, from data collection to baseline analysis and will have an introduction to more complex procedures. A dataset will be provided, or contact the instructor prior to the session (MDurland@aol.com) if you wish to work with your own data. [Maryann Durland, Rockman ET AL]

F: Computing Qualitative Research with QSR Nvivo (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

Qualitative evaluation studies require rigorous and sensitive management and analysis of text or other complex non-numerical data. New generation computing tools allow you to reduce complexity while retaining the richness of language and meaning. You will view and discuss uses of the most recent software, NVivo, including: the creation and handling of documents, storing and using information, autocoding, ways of saving time, asking questions, searching text and patterns of coding, scoping searches and assaying the results, interrogating data, modeling, reporting and winning credibility. Each discussion will be accompanied by computer demonstration and an opportunity to relate the tools to participants' own research challenges. [Lyn Richards, Qualitative Solutions and Research Pty Ltd]

G: Government Oversight and Program Evaluation (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

The workshop is designed for international participants interested in using program evaluation for government oversight functions to improve accountability, efficiency, and effectiveness of public programs. You will learn about the performance audit/evaluation model and its various phases: planning, fieldwork, report writing and presentation, and follow-up. We will discuss the dynamics of the evaluation environment and the use of professional standards in conducting audits/evaluations. Real-life examples will be used for class discussions and exercises. [Rakesh Mohan, WA State Joint Legislative Audit & Review Committee]

H: Outcomes for Success! Train-the-Trainer (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Intermediate

Outcomes for Success!, published by The Evaluation Forum, uses a logic model framework for building capacity in outcome-based evaluation. It is particularly relevant to non-profit agencies, governmental organizations and public and private grant makers. This session will share how to present this approach in training and coaching sessions. We will use a format of brief information overviews and intensive hands-on activities focusing on: Language and Framework of the Logic Model as the Basis for Performance Measurement Systems; Considering Your Theory of Change; Strengthening Indicator Selection; Selecting Your Evaluation Design and Data Collection Methods; Using Outcome-Based Evaluation for Program Improvement; and Overcoming Barriers to Implementing Outcome-Based Evaluation. This session will provide you with new techniques for teaching and facilitating evaluation skill development. [Jane Reisman & Anne Gienapp, The Evaluation Forum]

I: Formative Cost-Effectiveness and Cost-Benefit Analysis (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-4:00) LEVEL: Intermediate

Using the Cost-Procedure-process-Outcome Analysis Model, you will learn how to evaluate and systematically improve the cost-effectiveness and cost-benefit of human service systems, by carefully selecting a) Resources needed to implement b) the mixture of program Procedures that produce c) changes in biopsychosocial Processes which lead to d) the desired Outcomes. Concrete strategies for measuring relationships between costs, procedures, processes, and outcomes will be illustrated with examples from diverse settings including: mental health clinics, residential programs for urban youth, obesity treatments, suicide prevention, child management training, and substance abuse programs for noncriminal and criminally involved clients. Participants can build a Cost-Procedure-Process-Outcome Analysis model for their own program. We will examine a quantitative and a nonquantitative method of manipulating this model to optimize outcomes within cost constraints. [Brian Yates, American University]

J: Ways to Conduct Evaluations Collaboratively (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Intermediate

Collaborative evaluation is an approach to evaluation that engages program stakeholders actively in the evaluation process. When stakeholders collaborate with evaluators, their understanding increases and the utility of the evaluation is often enhanced. The presenters have used collaborative evaluation techniques in a variety of program settings, including education, extension, and non-profit organizations. [Rita O'Sullivan, University of North Carolina and John O'Sullivan, North Carolina A&T State University]

K: Using Evaluation Tools to Increase Program Accountability (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Intermediate

Evaluation has historically served accountability purposes. Today, more than ever, programs are subject to externally driven accountability demands. Accountability means being obligated to understand and explain (both internally and externally) an organization's actions; it links performance with results. Recent accountability reforms focus exclusively on external standards for accountability. Many organizations do not possess the internal capacity and will to respond to these accountability systems. Effective inquiry-minded organizations are able to link internal and external accountability through reflective inquiry. Responding to both internal and external demands for accountability demands additional skills. This interactive session will provide you with the tools to build capacity in programs to respond to these multiple demands. [Gretchen Rossman, University of Massachusetts at Amherst and Sharon Rallis, University of Connecticut]

L: Focus Group Interviewing (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Beginner

This introduction to focus group interviewing will include an overview of the essential qualities of focus group interviewing, the different approaches to conducting focus group interviews, as well as emerging trends in how focus groups are being used in evaluation, research and marketing. Through lecture, demonstration, discussion and practice, this session will introduce best practices in moderating, developing questions and analyzing results. [Richard Krueger, University of Minnesota]

M: Fundamentals of Evaluation: Links to Practice (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Intermediate

This workshop will enable you to understand the advantages and limitations of evaluation logic in undertaking policy and program evaluation, as well as how the logic framework employed (either explicitly or implicitly) can set the direction of an evaluation and influence the findings. You will re-examine an evaluation you have undertaken with a view to determining how the value set was determined, the criteria for the set used, and how this affected the outcome. Limitations of the use of evaluation logic to some forms of evaluative enquiry will be discussed. This workshop employs lecture, small-group activities, and discussion including a final discussion that will consider what kinds of evaluation issues or questions can be addressed through the logic of evaluation and what kinds of questions need to draw on other epistemological frameworks. [John Owen, University of Melbourne]

N: Making Sense of Participatory Evaluation (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Intermediate

This workshop will help evaluators who are generally familiar with participatory evaluation to gain a deeper understanding of the principles that undergird it and to make sense of participatory methods in practice. Topics to be discussed include: the rationale for participatory studies; the historical development of the approach; its strengths and weaknesses and what to do about them; and techniques for the meaningful involvement of evaluation participants in the design and operation of a study. You are encouraged to bring examples from your evaluation practice for reflection and critique. [Jean King, University of Minnesota]

O: Managing the Transition to Outcome-based Evaluation: The People Side of Change (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon)
LEVEL: Intermediate

There are many barriers to implementation of outcome-based evaluation and adopting an outcome measurement system will mean changing the way an organization does business. Evaluators, agency directors, and program managers must develop a strategy to ensure the transition will be successful for the people it affects, because it is the people in an organization who implement any change and outcome-based evaluation is no exception. Based on the model developed by William Bridges in his book, Managing Transitions, this workshop uses hands-on exercises and simulation to help participants think through organizational issues such as culture and values, leadership support, systems, resource availability and staff skills. You will identify methods to deal effectively with transition within your own organization and respond to the people side of the change to outcome-based systems. [Dawn Hanson Smart, The Evaluation Forum]

P: Developing a Performance-driven Organization I: Strategic Planning (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Beginner

Federal agencies are on the move, talking more about customer service and a focus on outcomes instead of outputs. The US Department of Education (ED) has embraced this move and its Strategic and Annual Plans are rated in the top three with parts specifically cited as models for other agencies. This session, a modified version of the training ED developed to teach the fundamentals of strategic planning and performance measurement to its managers, will cover: implementation and consequences of GPRA; current process, level, and policy context of federal planning and performance measurement; and the strategic planning process and how it may be applied to any organization, office, or program. [Natalia Pane, American Institutes for Research and Steven Zwillinger, US Dept of Education]

Q: Developing Reliable and Valid Questionnaires (Wednesday, Nov 1, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Beginner

This workshop will examine a variety of both supply and selection item formats including short answer, fill in the blank, paired comparison ranking, rating scales, and checklists. Suggestions for pilot testing and gathering reliability and validity data will be offered. Types of reliability to be discussed include measures of stability over time and instrument consistency. Validity discussion will focus on face, content, criterion related, and construct validity. Overall, the emphasis in this session will be on the practical "how to" aspects of developing good questionnaires and surveys. [Robert Covert, University of Virginia]

R: Multicultural Issues in Program Evaluation (Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

This workshop, led by an individual with extensive experience in both racial awareness training and program evaluation, will provide a forum for evaluators to address the issue of cultural diversity as it relates to the practice of evaluation. Particular emphasis will be placed on the treatment of minorities, women, the poor, and disabled people in the design and carrying out of evaluation. You will increase awareness of your own biases and prejudices and examine the extent to which these biases are reflected in the evaluations you conduct. You are encouraged to bring specific problem areas for discussion. Guidelines for conducting multiculturally fair evaluations will be presented and discussed. [Robert Covert, University of Virginia]

S: Empowerment Evaluation (Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

Empowerment evaluation is designed to build capacity and foster program improvement. It is an approach to evaluation that teaches people to help themselves by learning how to evaluate their own programs. The basic steps of empowerment evaluation include: 1) establishing a mission or unifying purpose for a group or program; 2) taking stock of the program - creating a baseline to measure future growth and improvement; and 3) planning for the future - establishing goals and strategies to achieve goals, as well as credible evidence to monitor change over time. The evaluator is more of a coach or facilitator in an empowerment evaluation, since the group is in charge of the evaluation. This interactive workshop will introduce you to the basic steps of the approach as well as a few web tools to facilitate an empowerment evaluation. [David Fetterman & Melissa Eiler, Stanford University]

T: Beyond Descriptives: Methods for Conducting Multi-level Analysis of Survey Data (Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00)

LEVEL: Intermediate

Designed to expose you to multi-level analytical approaches for analyzing survey data, this workshop will demonstrate how unknown program effects, traditionally accounted for by error or chance, can be uncovered using simple analytic probes into the data (i.e., structural equation modeling, item response theory, concept mapping). Gain the knowledge needed to examine survey data in a new paradigm: going beyond descriptives. You will be able to use the results of these analyses to target better the questions addressed by program staff. The tools provided will aid you in the improvement and revision of survey instruments. [Stacie Hudgens, University of Arizona]

U: A Beginners' Guide to Missing Data Analysis (Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

Through lecture, discussion, demonstration and use of simple hand calculations, you will learn the basics of missing data analysis: the meaning of Missing Completely at Random (MCAR) and Missing at Random (MAR) data; how to calculate MCAR; the strengths and weaknesses of various missing data handling methods including list wise and pair wise deletion; mean substitution, regression, and expectation maximization; and the use of the Missing Values Analysis subroutine in SPSS. Understanding will be enhanced through a discussion of the problems resulting from missing data (i.e., loss of cases, changes in estimates, etc.), and ways to determine which is the better missing data handling method. [E Lea Witta, University of Central Florida]

V: Using Stories as an Evaluation Method (Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00) LEVEL: Intermediate

Stories are an effective means of communicating the ways in which individuals are influenced by educational and human service agencies. Unfortunately, the story has been undervalued and largely ignored as a research and reporting procedure. Stories are sometimes regarded with suspicion because of the haphazard manner in which they are captured or the cavalier promise of what the story depicts. This session introduces effective strategies for discovering, collecting, analyzing and reporting stories that illustrate program processes, benefits, strengths or weaknesses. [Richard Krueger, University of Minnesota]

W: Creating Deliberative Forums: Making Participatory Evaluation Work (Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00)

LEVEL: Intermediate

This workshop will introduce you to the deliberative forum, an evaluation methodology that evokes deliberative discourse within heterogeneous groups. Designed to engage stakeholders of different privilege and perspective in democratic evaluative dialogue, deliberative forums thrive on diversity. Through lecture, discussion, video viewing and role-playing, you will be exposed to the knowledge and skills needed to integrate deliberative forums into your practice. Considerations to be discussed include: identification of issues for discussion; protocol development; coaching strategies; composition of groupings; conducting inclusive evaluative discourse; iterative democratic reporting; and the roles, responsibilities and liabilities for evaluators in conducting dialogue among stakeholders of different authority. [Cheryl MacNeil, The Sage Colleges; and Sandra Mathison & Melissa Freeman, State University of New York at Albany]

X: Developing a Performance-driven Organization II: Data Quality, Reporting and Continuous Improvement

(Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00) LEVEL: Beginner

No matter how good your planning, if your data are not reliable, then any decisions you make using them are misinformed and any progress assessments based on them are meaningless. This statement highlights the importance of data quality issues in any performance measurement or planning process. This session will address assessment and reporting issues and will focus on the Data Quality Standards developed by the US Department of Education to improve the reliability and validity of data reported to Congress. We will discuss each standard, provide a checklist for applying the standard, and offer examples that meet/do not meet the standard. You will participate in small group discussion of DQ issues, be able to adopt/adapt standards, and discuss the possible implications of these standards to your own work. Additional topics include discussing options and providing templates for reporting and examples of continuous improvement systems. [Natalia Pane, American Institutes for Research and Steven Zwilling, US Department of Education.]

Y: Logic Models: Practical Advice and Practice (Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00) LEVEL: Intermediate

A logic model presents a plausible and sensible model of how a program will work under certain conditions to solve identified problems. Their expanded use is primarily due to the usefulness of logical frameworks for performance measurement and strategic and operational planning, responding to the increase in requirements for accountability, team building, demonstrating results, and measuring program performance. We will use two case study based exercises. The first will develop logic models that provide a strategic logical framework for a multi-program organization with no strategic plan and clarify program design for one of its programs. The second will use the models to identify formative and summative evaluation issues and key performance measures that meet the needs of stakeholders. [Gretchen Jordan, Sandia National Laboratories and John McLaughlin, University of Southern California] with Small or Skewed Samples: Using Nonparametric Techniques

Z: Evaluating Programs with Small or Skewed Samples: Using Nonparametric Techniques

(Wednesday, Nov 1, 1:00-4:00) LEVEL: Intermediate

Do you work with skewed, small, or otherwise 'non-normal' samples? This user-friendly workshop focuses on statistical techniques that allow for the reality of many programs. You will receive a packet that takes you, step-by-step, through the tests demonstrated using sample data, printouts of what the SPSS screen should look like, and sample output. The non-parametric statistical techniques covered may vary based on your input, but will include techniques used to measure change over time, non-parametric correlations, and techniques that assess differences between groups. Contact the presenter (jcamacho@uic.edu) to learn details of having your data and/or research questions represented. [Jennifer Camacho, University of Illinois at Chicago]

AA: The General Logic of Evaluation (Sunday, Nov 5, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Intermediate

By contrast with the more familiar topics of (i) the logic of a particular evaluation, and (ii) the logic of the program being evaluated, this workshop addresses the rarely discussed topic of (iii) the underlying logic of all evaluation. The twenty or so named branches of evaluation—from program, personnel, and product evaluation to the less common ones like the evaluation of practice, buildings, and evaluations, and intradisciplinary evaluation—share a common and quite straightforward logic. Understanding what it is avoids serious errors and reduced efficiency in the design of evaluations. This shared logic provides a perspective that usefully links different branches of evaluation, often enabling the program evaluator, for example, to take advantage of techniques long familiar to the personnel evaluator. Parts of the general logic are easy to handle—identifying the core evaluation properties and processes (although 'nominating' and 'gap-ranking' are unfamiliar to most people, and very useful)—but parts are slightly more difficult, e.g., distinguishing criteria of merit from indicators of merit, and the much-neglected logic of synthesis (combining the sub-evaluations on several criteria into an overall evaluation, usually essential for an overall ranking). The workshop will run as a combination of discussion, presentation, and a little group work, and several handouts of unpublished materials will be provided, including a new notation for evaluation claims. [Michael Scriven, Claremont Graduate University]

AB: An Introduction to Evaluating Web-based Courses, Programs, and Services (Sunday, Nov 5, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Beginner

There is a strong movement in education and business to integrate the power and flexibility of the World Wide Web in disseminating information. Consequently, more and more classes, programs, and services are appearing online. As evaluators and consultants, it is necessary to keep up with this technological paradigm shift. This session will provide you with the knowledge necessary to increase the breadth of your traditional evaluation expertise to include the evaluation of online education, instruction, and business services. Topics covered include: building a knowledge base of different online courses and platforms; adopting traditional evaluability and accessibility assessments for online materials; learning and teaching styles; heuristics for assessing design quality; the role of technology; the role of the online facilitator; and communication with support staff. The session draws upon examples from the presenter's evaluations of distance education courses. However, the evaluation skills modeled can be adopted for evaluating programs in many fields including health and business. [David Therriault, University of Illinois at Chicago]

AC: Increasing Evaluation Capacity: The Art of Creating Winning Grant Proposals (Sunday, Nov 5, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Intermediate

In many contexts, increasing evaluation capacity requires the ability to develop and sustain a viable grants and contracts development effort. This workshop will provide you with the mechanics of: identifying possible funding opportunities; creating collaborative efforts with community partners; brainstorming and creative conceptual development; developing an effective grantwriting team; and constructing and submitting the grant application. You will engage in hands-on learning by working in small groups to brainstorm and develop proposal concepts in response to hypothetical grant requests. Specific topics addressed include:

- ♦ Tapping into information sources for tracking funding opportunities,
- ♦ Core components to grants and contracts applications,
- ♦ Developing effective grantwriting teams and workgroups,
- ♦ Key aspects of budget development and budget negotiation, and
- ♦ Managing grants and contracts and communicating with funders.

As a result of attending this workshop, you will enhance your skills in effective grants submission, with the goal of increased revenue and capacity for evaluation activity. [Michael Shafer, University of Arizona]

AD: Metaevaluation: Applications across Different Contexts of Practice (Sunday, Nov 5, 9:00-noon) LEVEL: Advanced

In program evaluation, the importance of metaevaluation has been stressed as both an ethical and a scientific obligation, to guide the work as well as to allow stakeholders in particular efforts to examine its strengths and weaknesses. But what this means in procedural and structural terms needs continual review. To the extent that constructions of evaluation differ—from the contracted studies of large federal projects to the internal office of a school district, to the evaluation needs of a social service agency and the practice of independent consultants—the frameworks for meta-evaluation can be significantly affected while the contributions to learning, development and practice remain critical. This workshop, with facilitators representing varying types of practice in a range of contexts, will examine different perspectives on metaevaluation, their iterations and implications. You will have the opportunity to draw on personal experiences to analyze needs and raise questions about applications in your own settings and as applied to differing models of use. [William Rickards, Alverno College, Daniel Stufflebeam, Western Michigan University, and Robert Stake, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign]
